Naomi Hall is college-educated with a great corporate job in downtown Detroit, a shiny silver Jaguar and a best friend worth millions of dollars. She is determined never to end up like her mother, Gloria Saunders, a churchgoing homemaker known for her mouth-watering soul food recipes. But when Naomi's marriage starts to dissolve, ugly truths from the past are forced into the spotlight and she must turn to Gloria for help.

This novel reveals the fragile and beautiful relationship between mother and daughter. They both are complicated and flawed, yet capable of change. But nobody said change was easy. Things begin to take a turn for the worse when one woman's life is threatened and they must make peace with each other to find happiness together.
