Not illustrated. 1861 Excerpt: ...or placed, or throw a good aspect to the ascendant, or a square in signs of short ascension, and be swift in motion, these are arguments that he will go, and with good success. The best direction to go in, is that in which If., if not afflicted, lies in the figure; and after him consider the J and lord of the third. CHAPTER VII. Of Matters pertaining to the Fourth House. To find anything mislaid or hidden If it belong to the querent, see to the second house; if to the querent's brother, the fourth; if to his father, the fifth; his mother, the eleventh, &c.; and his wife the eighth. If the lord of the second or any house of property, as above, be in an angle, it is within the house of the owner; and if the lord of the second, &c., be in the ascendant, or in the same sign with the lord of the ascendant, it is in that part of the house wherein he most abides, or where he keeps his chief valuables; but if the lord of the second be in the tenth, it is in the hall or dining-room. But if it be a mechanic or tradesman, in his shop; if a farmer, it is in the ordinary room of the house, or first room after entering. If the lord of the second be in the seventh, it is in the room in which his wife has most to do. If in the fourth, it is where the most aged of the household lodges, or in the middle of the house, or where his father stays. And so of the other houses. The quality of the place is known by the sign the significators are in. If the sign on the second, &c., be airy, it is hidden in the eaves or topmost part of the house, or of the room in which it is; and if it be in the field or garden, &c., it will be found on high, hanging to the branch of a tree, &c. If the signs be watery, it is in the dairy, or wash-house, or near the water. In fiery...
